

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A server machine to which data can easily be input from a cellar telephone, and which can deal with various services.

The server machine includes a first reception device for receiving registration data containing a user identifier and user data or a recipient address and a recipient identifier, a storage unit for storing the user data, user identifier, recipient address and recipient identifier received by the first reception device such that they are associated with each other, a second reception device for receiving a user identifier and a recipient identifier from a portable terminal device, a retrieval device for retrieving user data and a recipient address associated with the user identifier and recipient identifier received by the second reception device from the storage unit, and a transmission device for transmitting the retrieved user data based on the retrieved recipient address.